Chapter 1 - The New Beginning

The world changed dramatically after Dr. Thomas May vanished from existence, taking with him the secrets of time travel. The Chronovisor, that mysterious device that had allowed glimpses across time and space, fell silent - its quantum pathways somehow blocked by forces we still don't fully understand. Perhaps the Order of Shadows had found a way to seal off temporal access, or maybe the universe itself had closed these dangerous doors. Whatever the cause, we were now limited to experiencing time as it unfolded naturally, moment by moment.

In the years following May's disappearance, many of his predictions took unexpected turns. While he had foreseen RFK Jr.'s rise to power, fate had other plans. The 2024 election instead saw Donald Trump achieve a stunning victory that shocked the global establishment. Despite four assassination attempts - including a near-miss with a drone strike in Florida and a poisoning attempt at a rally in Ohio - Trump proved remarkably resilient. Under his leadership, America began a dramatic realignment of its global alliances.

The most controversial of these moves was withdrawing from NATO, a decision that sent shockwaves through the international community. The elite power structures that Dr. May had warned about found their influence dramatically diminished as their primary military alliance crumbled. Yet they maintained their grip on the United Kingdom and parts of Western Europe, consolidating their remaining power base there.

Meanwhile, the Eastern European conflict reached its climax as President Putin achieved victory in Ukraine. The aftermath brought shocking revelations - former President Zelenskyy faced charges of treason, alleged to have misappropriated billions in foreign aid. His execution by firing squad in 2025 marked a dark end to a complex chapter in history.

But it was in the Middle East where Dr. May's most crucial prediction began unfolding. As Israel faced mounting pressures from surrounding Islamic states, a remarkable figure emerged from Iran - a charismatic young leader known to us only as Mohammed Ishmael. At just 23 years old, this descendant of both Ishmael (son of Abraham) and the Prophet Mohammed began brokering unprecedented peace talks between Israel and its longtime adversaries.

Those of us who had read May's accounts watched these developments with growing unease. The young leader's words were compelling, his presence magnetic, his promises of peace seductive. Yet we remembered May's warnings about deception and false peace in the end times. When Mohammed Ishmael proposed a radical plan for sharing the Temple Mount between all three Abrahamic faiths, many celebrated it as a breakthrough. But others saw in it the potential fulfillment of ancient prophecies about the desecration of sacred spaces.

The Chronovisor's silence left us flying blind, unable to peek ahead at the consequences of these momentous changes. We could only watch and wait as events unfolded, hoping that Dr. May's final warnings would help us recognize the signs of what was to come. The Order of Shadows had become more subtle in their operations, but their influence could still be felt in the shadows of world events.

In research facilities across the globe, their work with genetic manipulation continued under deep cover. While the public COVID crisis had ended, new biotechnology programs emerged under the guise of "health initiatives" and "genetic wellness" campaigns. We could only speculate about their true purposes.

The loss of Dr. May and the Chronovisor taught us a harsh lesson - some knowledge comes at a terrible price. Yet his sacrifice left us with crucial insights into the patterns and players shaping our world. As I write these words, Mohammed Ishmael is preparing to address the United Nations with his comprehensive Middle East peace plan. The world holds its breath, wondering if this young visionary will finally bring peace to the cradle of civilization.

But those of us who remember May's warnings watch with growing concern, knowing that sometimes the most dangerous deceptions come wrapped in the most beautiful promises of peace.

The British monarchy, that centuries-old pillar of stability, faced its own dramatic upheaval in late 2024. King Charles III, after a brief but dignified reign, shocked the nation by announcing his abdication due to advancing cancer. The tabloids erupted with speculation, but palace insiders revealed the King's determination to ensure a smooth transition while he still maintained his faculties.

Perhaps even more startling was Prince Harry's sudden return to royal duties. The circumstances surrounding his divorce from Meghan Markle became the subject of intense media scrutiny. The Daily Mail published explosive allegations about DNA tests that cast doubt on the parentage of their second child. More sensational stories emerged in The Sun claiming evidence of "mystical manipulation" - old books of spells allegedly found in their Montecito home, along with curious artifacts that suggested deeper layers of deception. While many dismissed these as typical tabloid fabrications, those of us who had studied Dr. May's writings recognized patterns that aligned with his warnings about the Order's use of ancient occult practices in modern power plays.

But it was in Jerusalem where the most significant prophecies began materializing. In a moment that nearly brought the world to the brink, Prime Minister Netanyahu - increasingly influenced by ultra-orthodox advisors - had ordered the preparation of Israel's nuclear arsenal.

Intelligence sources later revealed his belief that Zechariah's vision of a flying scroll "filled with fire" that would purify the land was a divine prediction of nuclear warfare. The world held its breath as missile silos were readied.

It was at this crucial moment that Mohammed Ishmael demonstrated why many were beginning to view him as a miracle worker. In a private meeting that lasted through the night, he convinced Netanyahu to embrace a different interpretation of prophecy. The young leader's knowledge of both Jewish and Islamic scripture was profound, and his charisma proved irresistible. By dawn, the missiles were stood down.

The peace treaty that followed in early 2025 seemed to achieve the impossible. Islamic states, led by Iran, agreed to recognize Israel's right to rebuild the Third Temple on the Temple Mount. In return, Israel committed to preserving the Al-Aqsa Mosque and sharing the sacred space. The agreement, set to last seven years, was hailed as the deal of the century. Mohammed Ishmael's signature at the bottom of the document, written in both Arabic and Hebrew, seemed to carry the weight of divine authority.

Yet those of us who remembered Dr. May's research noted an unsettling detail - the treaty's seven-year timeframe aligned precisely with ancient prophecies about a false peace in Jerusalem. As crowds celebrated in the streets of Tel Aviv and Tehran, we couldn't help but wonder if we were watching the fulfillment of warnings that had echoed through time.

The Order of Shadows maintained an unusually low profile during these developments, their usual patterns of interference notably absent. This, perhaps more than anything else, made us nervous. Dr. May had taught us that the Order was most dangerous when they appeared to be doing nothing at all.

What the world didn't know - what even most of the Order's own members didn't realize - was the true nature of Mohammed Ishmael's origins. The story began in the rubble of ancient Iraq, in a classified military operation that preceded the more public events of 9/11. In July 2001, several conspiracy websites including DarkTruths and AncientSecrets reported a remarkable discovery: a perfectly preserved body in what appeared to be an ancient stasis chamber. The location: a hidden chamber beneath the ruins of ancient Babylon.

The body, according to leaked documents, showed no signs of decomposition despite its extreme age. Initial DNA testing suggested it was thousands of years old, yet appeared to have died only hours before discovery.

Ancient Sumerian tablets found nearby identified the body as that of Gilgamesh - known in biblical texts as Nimrod, the mighty hunter before the Lord, the first world king who dared to challenge divine authority.

The timing of the discovery's cover-up - just months before 9/11 - led some researchers to suggest that the subsequent attacks served multiple purposes, including diverting attention from this earth-shattering find. The body was quietly transported to a secret facility in northern Virginia, where it underwent extensive study under Operation Eternal Phoenix.

The breakthrough came through an unlikely source - the widely publicized case of Chris Long, the Washington state resident whose DNA changed to match his bone marrow donor's after a transplant. While this case made headlines in 2019, it merely confirmed what black project scientists had discovered decades earlier through classified experiments in genetic transfer. The Order's scientists had already perfected the process of DNA overwriting in the early 1990s, using techniques that wouldn't become public knowledge until the mRNA revolution of the 2020s.

Their chosen vessel was the unborn child of Fatima Al-Rashid, a devoted follower of the Salafi movement within Shiite Islam. The Salafis, known for their strict interpretation of Islamic texts and their belief in returning to the practices of the earliest Muslims, provided the perfect ideological framework for their plan. While most Salafis are actually Sunni, this particular branch had emerged from a secret Shiite revival movement that believed the Mahdi would emerge from their ranks.

Using advanced stem cell techniques and genetic manipulation, they began the process of overwriting the fetus's DNA with genetic material extracted from Nimrod's bone marrow. The process was timed to coincide with specific astronomical alignments that ancient texts suggested were crucial for the transference of consciousness.

The parallels between Islamic prophecies of the Mahdi and biblical descriptions of the Antichrist are striking:

- The Mahdi is described as a young man of noble descent, while Revelation speaks of a leader who emerges from an ancient bloodline
- Islamic traditions say the Mahdi will make a peace treaty with the Jews lasting seven years - matching exactly with Daniel's prophecy about the Antichrist's covenant
- The Mahdi is said to receive supernatural knowledge and wisdom; the Antichrist is described as having "fierce features" and understanding "dark sentences" (Daniel 8:23)

- Both figures are described as charismatic leaders who will unite various faiths under a single banner
- Islamic texts predict the Mahdi will discover lost ancient knowledge; biblical prophecies warn of the Antichrist wielding "the wisdom of the ancients"
- Both are associated with the number 666, though interpreted differently in each tradition

The Order had created their perfect synthesis - a being who would fulfill both sets of prophecies simultaneously, carrying within his cells the literal DNA of humanity's first would-be god-king. Mohammed Ishmael's seemingly miraculous diplomatic achievements were powered by something far older and darker than modern political skill - they were the result of Nimrod's ancient charisma and knowledge, reborn into the modern world through forbidden science.

As he continued to broker peace across ancient divides, few suspected that this young leader's very existence represented the ultimate fusion of ancient magic and modern technology, of prophecy and genetic engineering, of humanity's oldest ambitions and its newest capabilities.

The significance of symbols and sacred texts ran deeper than most realized. Ancient Hebrew manuscripts of Revelation, when compared with Islamic calligraphy, revealed startling parallels. The bismillah - "In the name of Allah" - when written in its traditional Arabic calligraphic form, bore an uncanny resemblance to the Greek numbers representing 666. But this was merely the surface of a deeper mystery.

Dr. May's final notes, recovered after his disappearance, contained urgent warnings about the WHO's global vaccination programs. What appeared to be public health initiatives masked a more sinister agenda - the mass distribution of genetic material derived from Nimrod's preserved DNA. The mRNA delivery system provided the perfect vehicle for what the Order called "Project Legacy."

Some events, Dr. May had insisted, were fixed points in time - immutable moments that could not be altered even with the Chronovisor's power. The Book of Revelation spoke of such certainties, describing them as "things which must shortly come to pass." The genetic modifications introduced through the global vaccination program weren't meant to alter these fixed events, but rather to prepare humanity for them.

The Order's ultimate goal became clear: by introducing Nimrod's genetic code into the human population, they were creating a biological bridge - one that would fundamentally alter the spiritual nature of those affected. Ancient texts spoke of how the nephilim of old had corrupted human bloodlines, and now modern science was accomplishing something similar through sophisticated genetic manipulation.

The Book of Enoch's descriptions of the fallen angels' rebellion took on new significance in light of these developments. These entities, led by HaSatan, had once corrupted humanity through direct intervention. Now, through their human agents in the Order, they were achieving the same goal through genetic science.

The implications were staggering. Those whose genetic code had been altered would find themselves biologically incompatible with divine redemption, their very essence transformed at the molecular level. They would become, in effect, biological heirs to the nephilim of old - bound to follow HaSatan when he would reclaim his ancient position as leader of the fallen angels.

Mohammed Ishmael wasn't just a diplomatic miracle worker or a genetically engineered leader - he was the first of a new kind of being, one that bridged the ancient world of the nephilim with modern humanity. His DNA, derived from Nimrod, was the template for a transformation that was already spreading through the world's population, hidden within the seemingly beneficial medical advances of the age.

The Order's ancient goal of corrupting human bloodlines had found its ultimate expression in modern biotechnology. As Mohammed Ishmael continued to gather political power and religious devotion, the genetic changes he represented were silently spreading through the population, preparing humanity for the final stages of a plan set in motion millennia ago.

Dr. May's last message, found scrawled in his private journal, was simple but chilling: "Some doors, once opened, cannot be closed. Some changes, once made, cannot be undone. The markers are in the blood now - both the physical and the spiritual. Watch for the signs in the heavens, for they will mirror what has already been written in our cells."

Indeed, what had once been presented as mere entertainment through docudramas and speculative television shows now revealed itself as a carefully orchestrated campaign of desensitization. The Order had spent decades seeding these ideas into popular culture, preparing humanity to accept what was to come. Programs about ancient astronauts and evolutionary leaps hadn't just been programming - they had been programming us.

The truth was far more intricate than even these shows had suggested. While they spoke of ancient visitors modifying human DNA, they never revealed the ultimate purpose: to create a population genetically predisposed to accept certain forms of spiritual influence. The modern genetic modifications weren't introducing anything new - they were reactivating dormant code that had been present since the days of Nimrod, waiting for the right moment and the right technology to be awakened.

Dr. May's research had uncovered references to this in ancient Sumerian tablets that hadn't been made public. They spoke of "the sleeping seeds of the sky lords" and "the awakening that would come in the final age."

Modern genetic science had finally caught up to what the ancients had known - that human DNA wasn't just a biological blueprint, but a form of spiritual technology.

The Order's scientists had discovered that certain genetic sequences acted as spiritual antenna, literally altering how human consciousness interacted with higher dimensional realities. By reactivating these sequences through modern genetic manipulation, they weren't just changing biology - they were changing humanity's very ability to perceive and interact with spiritual forces.

Mohammed Ishmael's unprecedented diplomatic achievements weren't just the result of charisma or political skill. His altered genetic structure allowed him to tap into forms of consciousness and influence that normal humans couldn't access. When people stood in his presence, they weren't just experiencing his personal magnetism - they were being influenced by abilities that had once been the exclusive domain of the nephilim.

The mRNA delivery systems used in global vaccination programs weren't just carrying instructions for protein production - they were carrying the keys to unlock these ancient capacities in the general population. Each injection contained carefully selected sequences derived from Nimrod's preserved DNA, designed to gradually shift human consciousness toward a state more susceptible to certain forms of spiritual influence.

What the ancient aliens programs had presented as historical speculation was actually a preview of coming attractions. The Order wasn't just copying the work of ancient astronauts - they were completing it, using modern technology to fulfill an agenda set in motion thousands of years ago. The transformation of humanity wasn't a historical event - it was happening in real time, one injection at a time, one genetic modification at a time.

The ultimate irony was that by convincing people that evolution was a purely natural process, they had prepared humanity to accept unnatural modifications as simply another step in human development. The theory of evolution hadn't just challenged religious belief - it had paved the way for humanity to accept directed evolution, guided not by natural selection, but by those who had long ago appointed themselves as humanity's secret shepherds.

As I write these words, Mohammed Ishmael's influence continues to grow. Each diplomatic triumph, each peace agreement, each seeming miracle draws more people into the sphere of his influence. Few suspect that their very ability to perceive him as a messianic figure has been programmed into their cells, activated by genetic modifications that bridge the ancient and the modern, the physical and the spiritual.

Dr. May's final warnings take on new urgency in light of these developments. We aren't just witnessing a political transformation or a medical revolution - we're watching the fulfillment of an ancient agenda, one that uses modern science to achieve what was once done through more direct intervention. The gods haven't returned - they never left. They simply waited for humanity to develop the technology to complete what they had begun.

Chapter 2 - The Fall of the Global Economy

The restructuring of global power that followed the great realignment of 2025 marked the most dramatic shift in international relations since World War II. As the old order crumbled, five distinct power blocs emerged from the ashes of the former global system:

1. NATO ALLIANCE

- Leadership: European Union Central Command (Brussels)
- Core Members: Germany, France, Spain, Italy, Netherlands, Belgium, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Finland, Poland, Portugal, Greece
- Currency: Digital Euro (DE)
- Notable: Maintained strong military alliance but struggled with economic independence

2. ALLIED POWERS

- Leadership: Dual command structure between London and Washington
- Core Members: United States, United Kingdom
- Currency: Allied Sterling Dollar (ASD)
- Notable: Maintained secret support channel to Israel while publicly neutral

3. BRICS COALITION

- Leadership: Rotating council between members
- Core Members: Brazil, Russia, India, China, South Africa, United States*, United Kingdom* (*Special trading status)
- Currency: BRICS Gold Standard Note (BGN)
- Notable: Became dominant global trading currency by 2026

4. BABYLON ALLIANCE

- Leadership: Iran (Reformed as New Babylon)
- Core Members: Iran, Iraq, Syria, Lebanon, Yemen, Qatar, UAE, Saudi Arabia, Turkey
- Currency: Digital Dinar (DD)
- Notable: Unified under Mohammed Ishmael's influence

5. THE RISING SUN CONFEDERATION

- Leadership: Japan
- Core Members: Japan, South Korea, Taiwan, Philippines, Vietnam, Thailand, Malaysia, Singapore
- Currency: Digital Yen (DY)
- Notable: Formed as counterbalance to Chinese influence

Israel stood alone as the world's only truly independent state, though it maintained secret channels with the Allied Powers through Trump's backchannel diplomacy. The arrangement was delicate - publicly, the U.S. and UK had to maintain their BRICS alignment, while covertly ensuring Israel's security.

The Commonwealth nations found themselves in an unusual position. Despite Australia's increasing calls for independence, the economic turbulence of the period forced them, along with Canada and New Zealand, to maintain their ties to the UK. These nations became vital strategic assets in the Allied Powers' global network, providing crucial geographic reach and resource access.

The BRICS Gold Standard Note (BGN) emerged as the world's primary trading currency, backed by a combination of gold reserves and digital blockchain technology. This new currency system effectively ended the US dollar's reign as global reserve currency, though the transition was surprisingly smooth thanks to careful economic orchestration by all major powers.

The period from 2025 to 2028 marked what historians would later call "The Great Deception" - three years of unprecedented global prosperity and cooperation. Trade flourished between the power blocs, with the BGN providing a stable foundation for international commerce. Mohammed Ishmael's influence continued to grow, as his role in maintaining peace between these various factions seemed almost supernatural in its effectiveness.

The World Economic Forum's annual meetings in Davos became a showcase of this new cooperation, with representatives from all five power blocs engaging in what appeared to be genuine collaboration. Even traditional enemies found ways to work together, their ancient grievances seemingly dissolved by the new economic prosperity.

But beneath this facade of cooperation, other forces were at work. The Order of Shadows had not been idle during this period of apparent peace. Their genetic modification program continued quietly, hidden behind the massive vaccination campaigns that accompanied this new era of global cooperation. Each power bloc had its own version of these health initiatives, but all ultimately served the same master.

The digital currency systems adopted by each bloc laid the groundwork for something more sinister - a level of financial control unprecedented in human history. While people celebrated their newfound prosperity, few noticed how dependent they had become on these new digital systems. The ability to buy or sell increasingly required participation in these networks, which in turn required compliance with ongoing "health protocols."

Israel's independence became increasingly precarious as the years progressed. While maintaining its sovereignty, it found itself more and more dependent on the secret support of the Allied Powers. The Temple Mount sharing agreement, brokered by Mohammed Ishmael, seemed to be working, but tensions simmered beneath the surface of apparent peace.

By 2028, the world had been completely transformed. The old institutions - the UN, World Bank, IMF - had been replaced by new structures that seemed more efficient and equitable. Yet those who remembered Dr. May's warnings recognized the patterns he had predicted. The three years of peace and prosperity were setting the stage for something else, something that would make the previous global financial crisis look like a mere rehearsal.

As 2028 drew to a close, subtle cracks began appearing in this new world order. The first signs were easily dismissed - minor disruptions in supply chains, small fluctuations in currency values, isolated reports of unusual banking activities. But to those who knew what to look for, these were the preliminary tremors of a coming earthquake that would shake the very foundations of global society.

The technological explosion that accompanied this new world order was nothing short of miraculous. What had once been science fiction became everyday reality, as if someone had suddenly lifted restrictions on advanced technologies that had been held back for decades.

Medical pods that looked like they belonged on the starship Enterprise appeared in doctors' offices worldwide. These devices could diagnose, treat, and heal patients with virtually no recovery time needed.

Traditional hospitals became obsolete almost overnight. The massive structures were converted into research centers or simply abandoned as medical care shifted to local clinics equipped with these revolutionary healing

Pods. Surgery, once a traumatic and invasive procedure, became as simple as lying in a chamber for an hour while focused energy beams and nanobots did their work. Cancer treatments that once took months could be completed in an afternoon.

But a disturbing pattern emerged. Those who had received the early COVID vaccines showed increasing susceptibility to a range of mysterious ailments. While these conditions were easily treatable with the new medical technology, they required regular treatments to maintain health. It was as if their immune systems had been fundamentally altered, creating a dependency on the very medical system that could heal them.

Meanwhile, the unvaccinated population remained remarkably resilient, their natural immunity seemingly strengthened by avoiding the earlier interventions.

In the shadows of this medical revolution, remnants of the old power structure refused to release their grip on global control. Dr. Tedros Ghebreyesus and Dr. Anthony Fauci, though officially retired from public life, maintained deep connections within the scientific community. Their alignment with the BABYLON faction wasn't coincidental - Mohammed Ishmael's rise to power had provided them with new opportunities to implement control systems they had only dreamed of before.

While Klaus Schwab's World Economic Forum had crumbled, his legacy lived on in unexpected ways. Throughout the governments of every power bloc, individuals who had gone through his Young Global Leaders program remained in positions of influence. These people weren't traditional sleeper agents - they had no conscious knowledge of their programming. Their conditioning had been subtle, achieved through years of careful manipulation and specialized training programs. They simply believed they were working for the greater good, making "correct" decisions based on their "education."

These sleeper agents existed at every level of society - in government, in corporations, in educational institutions, and even in religious organizations. They could be activated through specific trigger phrases or events, their programmed responses appearing to them as their own natural thoughts and decisions. The genius of this system was its invisibility - even the agents themselves were unaware of their role.

The technological advancement wasn't limited to medicine. Transportation systems that resembled teleportation began replacing traditional travel methods. Quantum computers became commonplace, their processing power solving problems that had plagued humanity for centuries. Clean energy technology eliminated pollution almost overnight, though the control of these systems remained firmly in the hands of the five power blocs.

But all of this progress came with a price. Each new technology, each medical treatment, each advancement further integrated people into a system of dependency. The convenience was addictive, the benefits undeniable, but beneath it all ran a current of control that grew stronger with each passing day.

The Order of Shadows watched these developments with satisfaction. The technologies they had suppressed for decades were now being released in a controlled manner, each innovation serving to further their ultimate agenda. The medical pods weren't just healing people - they were subtly altering them, preparing them for something bigger. The quantum computers weren't just processing data - they were gathering it, building comprehensive profiles of every human on Earth.

Mohammed Ishmael's influence continued to grow during this period, his apparent mastery of these new technologies adding to his aura of divine guidance. Few suspected that his intimate knowledge of these advanced systems came from the same source as his diplomatic abilities - the recovered DNA of humanity's first would-be god-king.

As 2028 approached its end, the stage was set for the next phase. The sleeper agents were in place, the technology was deployed, and the population had become dependent on systems they didn't truly understand. All that remained was the signal to begin the final transformation - a signal that would come from a source few expected, in a way that would shake the foundations of this carefully constructed new world order.

Chapter 3 - Religion of the New Age

The religious landscape of 2028 had become as fractured and realigned as the political sphere, with ancient faiths resurging and traditional beliefs undergoing radical transformations. Each power bloc developed its own distinct spiritual identity, creating a world where geopolitical boundaries increasingly aligned with religious divisions.

ISRAEL AND THE TEMPLE The completion of the Third Temple marked a renaissance of ancient Jewish practices. The Kohen Gadol (High Priest) once again performed the daily offerings according to Biblical law, and the sounds of the shofar echoed across Jerusalem's hills. A growing movement within Judaism, known as Messianic awareness, saw increasing numbers of Jews acknowledging Yeshua as the promised Messiah, though they maintained their Jewish identity and practices. The Temple service continued according to Torah law, creating a curious blend of ancient practice and emerging revelation.

THE BABYLON ALLIANCE AND THE FALLEN

STONE The Islamic nations under Mohammed Ishmael's leadership maintained their devotion to Allah, but with a troubling truth emerging about this deity's true identity.

The black stone housed within the Dome of the Rock, long venerated by Muslims, carried a dark secret. In Arabic, "Allah" derives from "Al-Ilah," meaning "the god," but linguistic scholars uncovered its connection to the Hebrew "alah" (אלה), meaning "curse" or "to curse." This stone, believed to be a meteorite, was increasingly understood by researchers to be connected to the fallen angel who had first introduced himself as humanity's alternative deity.

The Dome of the Rock became the center of worship rather than the Al-Aqsa mosque, as if drawn by some magnetic spiritual force emanating from the ancient stone. Mohammed Ishmael's connection to this site seemed to grow stronger with each passing month, his speeches there drawing crowds that reported experiencing supernatural sensations in his presence.

NATO'S RETURN TO PAGANISM The NATO countries experienced a startling revival of their pre-Christian religions:

- Germany embraced a resurgence of Norse and Germanic paganism, with the worship of Odin and Thor returning to mainstream practice

- France saw a revival of Gallic druidism and the worship of Celtic deities like Cernunnos and Brigid
- Spain returned to Iberian paganism, mixing Celtiberian and Roman influences
- Italy experienced a renaissance of Roman polytheism, with the Pantheon reopened for worship of the old gods
- Nordic countries openly returned to Viking religious practices
- Greece officially reinstated the worship of the Olympic gods, with the Parthenon restored as a functional temple
- Poland saw a revival of Slavic paganism and the worship of gods like Perun and Svetovid

THE RISING SUN CONFEDERATION The Asian

nations strengthened their traditional spiritual practices:

- Japan: Shinto practices became mandatory in schools, with State Shinto returning as the official ideology
- Korea: Shamanic practices merged with modern technology, creating "digital mudang" ceremonies
- Taiwan: Traditional Chinese folk religion experienced a revival, with temples using advanced technology for divination
- Southeast Asian nations: Buddhist practices merged with local animistic traditions, creating new syncretic forms

THE CHRISTIAN TRANSFORMATION The most dramatic changes occurred within Christianity. South African theologian Japie van Zyl's teachings gained international attention when he proposed that the traditional Jesus Christ figure had been manufactured by Roman authorities to create a "acceptable" messiah, one who would lead people away from Torah observance. His controversial assertion that "Jesus Christ" would be the identity assumed by the Antichrist - fulfilling the prophecy that many would come in his name - found unexpected support in historical documents newly discovered in the Vatican archives.

In America, teachers like Michael Rood and Jonathan Cahn gained larger followings as they advocated for a return to Hebrew roots. Jake Hilton's video series on the "Great Deception" went viral, connecting ancient prophecies with modern genetic manipulation. The rediscovered works of Rob Skiba and Andries B. Louw proved prophetic, particularly their warnings about genetic manipulation being used to create a seemingly divine figure.

The newly elected Pope Leo XIV, the youngest Jesuit ever to hold the position, accelerated the Vatican's merger with ancient Roman paganism. His first papal bull mandated Sunday worship across all Catholic churches, explicitly connecting it to the Roman sun god Sol Invictus. The enforcement of Sunday observance, backed by digital currency systems that made commerce difficult on Sundays, created clear battle lines between those maintaining Biblical Sabbath observance and those embracing the new Roman synthesis.

Mohammed Ishmael's role in this religious transformation became increasingly complex. His ability to speak to all faiths, while seemingly respecting their traditions, appeared supernatural. Yet those studying the ancient texts recognized a pattern - he wasn't just unifying religions, he was synthesizing them into something new, something that carried echoes of Nimrod's ancient attempt to create a single world religion centered on himself.

By late 2028, the world's religious landscape had become sharply divided between those returning to ancient Biblical practices and those embracing various forms of paganism, whether openly or disguised as modernized traditional religion. The stage was being set for a final spiritual confrontation that would shake the foundations of every faith system on Earth.

The genetic modifications introduced years earlier through various programs began showing unexpected spiritual effects. Those who had received them reported increasingly vivid spiritual experiences, particularly during religious ceremonies. What wasn't widely understood was how these modifications were altering human consciousness to be more receptive to certain forms of spiritual influence - the kind that the ancient Nephilim had once wielded over humanity.

The discovery that shook the religious world to its core came in October 2028, when Israeli authorities finally confirmed what a small group of researchers had known since the 1970s - Ron Wyatt's controversial discovery of the Ark of the Covenant had been real. The sacred artifact had remained hidden in a chamber beneath Golgotha, precisely where Wyatt had claimed to find it decades earlier.

The prophecy of Jeremiah was finally fulfilled: "וְהָיָה כִּי- רָבוּ וּפְרִיתָם בְּאֶרֶץ, בְּיָמִים הַהֵמָּה נְאֻם-יְהוָה, לֹא-יֹאמְרוּ עוֹד, אֲרֻנוֹת בְּרִית-יְהוָה; וְלֹא יַעֲלֶה עַל-לֵב, וְלֹא יִזְכְּרוּ בוֹ וְלֹא יִפְקְדוּ, וְלֹא יַעֲשֶׂה עוֹד." "And it shall come to pass, when you multiply and increase in the land in those days, says YHWH, they shall no longer say, 'The Ark of the Covenant of YHWH.' It shall not come to mind, nor shall they remember it, nor shall they visit it, nor shall it be made anymore." (Jeremiah 3:16)

The timing was significant - it occurred during the Feast of Tabernacles (Sukkot), fulfilling another prophecy from Zechariah: "וְהָיָה, כָּל-הַנּוֹתֵר מִכָּל-הַגּוֹיִם, הַבָּאִים, עַל- רֹשָׁלַם; וְעָלוּ מִדִּי שָׁנָה בְּשָׁנָה, לְהַשְׁמִתוֹת לְמִלְחָה יְהוָה צְבָאוֹת, וְלַחֲגִי

אֶת-הַגּוֹי הַשָּׂכֵן "And it shall come to pass that everyone who is left of all the nations which came against Jerusalem shall go up from year to year to worship the King, YHWH of hosts, and to keep the Feast of Tabernacles." (Zechariah 14:16)

The extraction operation was conducted with utmost secrecy and reverence. The chamber where the Ark had rested for over two millennia was accessed through a carefully excavated tunnel. The initial team included both rabbinical authorities and military specialists trained in handling ancient artifacts. What they found exceeded all expectations - the Ark was perfectly preserved, its gold untarnished, the cherubim still gleaming as if newly fashioned.

The transport to the Temple was done during the night of Hoshana Rabbah, the last great day of the Feast. As prophesied in the Psalm: "וְהִנֵּשְׂאוּ, רְאשֵׁיכֶם, וְהִנֵּשְׂאוּ, פִתְחֵי עוֹלָם; וְיָבֹא, מֶלֶךְ הַכְּבוֹד" "Lift up your heads, O gates! And be lifted up, O ancient doors, that the King of glory may come in." (Psalm 24:7)

The Ark's installation in the Holy of Holies marked the true completion of the Third Temple. The High Priest's entry on Yom Kippur now carried the full weight of Biblical significance. The presence of the Ark transformed the Temple from a symbol to the actual dwelling place of YHWH's glory, as spoken by Ezekiel: "וְהָיָה מִשְׁכְּנִי עִלֵּיהֶם, וְהָיִיתִי לָהֶם לֵאלֹהִים; וְהָמָּה יִהְיוּ-לִי לְעָם" "My dwelling place shall be with them; I will be their God, and they shall be My people." (Ezekiel 37:27)

What few understood was how this event would catalyze the final stages of prophetic fulfillment. The presence of the Ark in the Temple created a spiritual nexus point, a convergence of physical and spiritual realities that would prove crucial in the events to come. The ancient power that had once caused the walls of Jericho to fall and struck down those who touched it inappropriately was once again present in Jerusalem.

Mohammed Ishmael's reaction to this development was particularly telling. While publicly celebrating this "restoration of Jewish heritage," private sources reported his intense interest in accessing the Holy of Holies. His requests to "study" the Ark were politely but firmly refused by the Temple authorities, leading to the first subtle cracks in his carefully maintained facade of religious tolerance.

The Ark's return marked the beginning of the final countdown - though few recognized it at the time. As the prophets had written: "הִנֵּה יָמִים בָּאִים, נֹאֵם-יְהוָה; וְהִקְמַתִּי אֶת-הַדָּבָר הַטּוֹב, אֲשֶׁר דִּבַּרְתִּי אֶל-בֵּית יִשְׂרָאֵל וְעַל-בֵּית יְהוּדָה" "Behold, the days are coming, says YHWH, when I will perform that good thing which I have promised to the house of Israel and to the house of Judah." (Jeremiah 33:14)

The stage was now set for the final act of history's longest-running drama. The Ark had returned, the Temple was complete, and the world held its breath, waiting for what would come next.

As December 2028 drew to a close, the event prophesied in ancient texts unfolded before a watching world. Mohammed Ishmael's declaration at the Temple fulfilled Daniel's prophecy:

"וַיַּעֲמֵד בְּהִיכָל אֵל וַיִּתְגַּדֵּל עַל-כָּל-אֵל וַיַּעַל אֵל אֱלִים וַיְדַבֵּר נִפְלְאוֹת"

"And he shall stand in the Temple of God, exalting himself above all, and against the God of gods he shall speak astonishing things." (Daniel 11:36)

The assassination attempt played out on global media networks with horrifying clarity. The bullet struck Mohammed Ishmael directly in the head, what should have been a fatal wound captured in ultra-high definition by hundreds of cameras. The world watched in horror as their beloved peacemaker collapsed before the altar, fulfilling the prophecy in Revelation:

"וַיַּרְאָה אֶחָד מֵרֹאשָׁיו כְּמוֹ טְבוּחַ לַמָּוֶת וּמַכַּת מָוֶת אֲשֶׁר-לוֹ נִרְפְּאָה"

"And I saw one of his heads as if it had been mortally wounded, and his deadly wound was healed. And all the world marveled and followed the beast." (Revelation 13:3)

The arrest of Joseph Cohen, the alleged assassin, was broadcast live, but attention quickly shifted back to the Temple steps where something impossible was happening. The wound began to close before the watching world, the bullet emerging from the healing flesh like a rejected seed. Mohammed Ishmael's gasp for breath echoed through the Temple courts, amplified by the stunned silence of the crowd.

What happened next fulfilled the darkest warnings of ancient prophecy. Mohammed Ishmael, seemingly empowered rather than weakened by the assassination attempt, strode purposefully into the Temple. The guards, still in shock from his miraculous resurrection, made no move to stop him as he passed through the Holy Place and entered the Holy of Holies itself.

Just days earlier, during the reinstallation of the Ark, a maintenance worker named David Levy had accidentally brushed against the sacred vessel while adjusting a lighting fixture. Security footage showed him being instantly struck down, his body bearing the same signs of divine judgment recorded in the Biblical accounts. Yet now, the world watched in astonishment as Mohammed Ishmael not only entered the forbidden space but seated himself upon the Ark itself - the very throne of YHWH as described in Scripture:

"יְהוָה צְבָאוֹת יֹשֵׁב הַכְרֻבִּים" "YHWH of hosts, who dwells between the cherubim" (2 Samuel 6:2)

The act fulfilled the prophecy spoken of by Paul: "אֲשֶׁר יִתְנַגֵּד וַיִּתְרומם עַל כָּל־הַנִּקְרָא אֱל אוֹ עֲבֹדָה עַד כִּי־יֵשֵׁב בְּהִיכַל הָאֱלֹהִים בְּאֵלֵהֶם" "Who opposes and exalts himself above all that is called God or that is worshiped, so that he sits as God in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God." (2 Thessalonians 2:4)

His survival of contact with the Ark seemed to confirm his supernatural status to many observers. What they didn't understand was that his genetically modified body, carrying the restored DNA of Nimrod, had created a being that could interact with divine artifacts in ways normal humans could not.

Mohammed Ishmael's declaration from the Holy of Holies was broadcast globally. He claimed to be not just the Islamic Mahdi or the Jewish Messiah, but the returned Jesus Christ himself. His words were carefully chosen to appeal to all faiths, yet they fulfilled the warning given by Yeshua:

"כִּי רַבִּים יָבֹאוּ בִשְׁמִי לֵאמֹר אֲנִי הוּא הַמָּשִׁיחַ" "For many will come in My name, saying, 'I am the Christ.'" (Matthew 24:5)

The world's response was immediate and overwhelming. His miraculous survival and apparent immunity to divine judgment seemed to confirm his claims to divinity. Few recognized that they were witnessing the fulfillment of the prophecy about the strong delusion that would cause the world to believe the lie.

The stage was now set for the final phase of the Great Deception. The false messiah had revealed himself, survived death, and taken his seat in the Temple of God.

The countdown to humanity's final choice had begun.

The transformation of global religious authority happened swiftly after Mohammed Ishmael's dramatic display at the Temple. In a historic gathering at the United Nations, representatives from every nation voted unanimously to grant him emergency powers to address the world's mounting crises. The vote fulfilled Daniel's prophecy: "וְיִתְּנָהּ בְּרִית לְרַבִּים" - "And he shall confirm a covenant with many" (Daniel 9:27).

The Vatican's role proved crucial in this transition. Pope Leo XIV, in an unprecedented move, declared Mohammed Ishmael the true returned Christ, pointing to his miraculous survival and supernatural abilities as proof. The Pope assumed the position of chief religious administrator, fulfilling the role of the False Prophet described in Revelation: "וַיֵּרָא חַיָּה אַחֶרֶת עֹלָה מִן־הָאָרֶץ" - "Then I saw another beast coming up out of the earth" (Revelation 13:11).

One of Mohammed Ishmael's first acts was to officially change the day of worship from Saturday to Sunday, making it mandatory worldwide. The edict came with severe economic penalties for those who continued to observe the Biblical Sabbath. Digital currency systems were programmed to restrict transactions on Sundays, forcing compliance through financial pressure. This fulfilled the prophecy: "וַיִּסְבֹּר לְהַשְׁנִיָּה זְמַנִּין וְדָת" - "He shall intend to change times and law" (Daniel 7:25).

The deception proved particularly devastating for those who had built their faith on the doctrine of a pre-tribulation rapture. Many churches had taught their congregations they would be removed from Earth before such events could unfold. When these believers found themselves facing the very tribulation they had been assured they would escape, their faith crumbled. This fulfilled Paul's warning: "עַל־כֵּן יִשְׁלַח לָהֶם אֱלֹהִים מַעֲשֵׂה" - "For this reason God will send them strong delusion, that they should believe the lie" (2 Thessalonians 2:11).

A small remnant, however, remembered the true prophecies. They recognized the pattern laid out in Scripture - that the peace treaty with Israel would mark the beginning of the seven years, and that the "abomination of desolation" would occur at the midpoint. These believers recalled Yeshua's warning: "וְכַאֲשֶׁר תִּרְאוּ אֶת־שִׁקּוּץ מְשׁוּמִים ... אַז יִהְיֶה צָרָה גְדוֹלָה" - "When you see the abomination of desolation... then there will be great tribulation" (Matthew 24:15,21).

The remnant maintained their faith by meeting in secret, often in remote locations, sharing ancient manuscripts and forbidden Biblical texts. They understood that the true Messiah had warned them about this very deception: "הִנֵּה אֲמַרְתִּי לָכֶם מֵרָאשׁ" - "See, I have told you beforehand" (Matthew 24:25).

Mohammed Ishmael's influence continued to grow through supernatural displays that mimicked Biblical miracles. He could call down fire from heaven and perform healing miracles that seemed to rival those recorded in Scripture. Yet those who knew the prophecies recognized these as the very signs they had been warned about: "וַיַּעַשׂ אֹתוֹת גְּדוּלוֹת" - "He performs great signs" (Revelation 13:13).

The world had entered the second half of the seven-year period - the time Jacob's trouble, the Great Tribulation. Those who understood the prophecies knew that while the first three and a half years had brought false peace, the second half would reveal the true nature of the covenant with death that Israel and the nations had made.

The faithful remnant clung to the promises found in Daniel: "וּבְצֵאת הָהִיא יִמָּלֵט עַמֶּךָ" - "At that time your people shall be delivered" (Daniel 12:1). They understood that though the deception was great and the persecution severe, their deliverance would come not through escape but through endurance, as promised: "הַמְחַכֶּה וְיִגְיַע" - "Blessed is he who waits" (Daniel 12:12).

With Mohammed Ishmael's new powers granted by the United Nations, the world quickly descended into a global police state. He moved swiftly to consolidate power by outlawing all religions except for the new faith he proclaimed, uniting various traditions under his divine leadership.

Those who had studied ancient prophecies recognized this as the fulfillment of Revelation 13:15-17 - "And it was allowed to give breath to the image of the beast, so that the image of the beast might even speak and might cause those who would not worship the image of the beast to be slain. Also it causes all, both small and great, both rich and poor, both free and slave, to be marked on the right hand or the forehead, so that no one can buy or sell unless he has the mark, that is, the name of the beast or the number of its name."

Mohammed Ishmael wasted no time in implementing this prophecy. A global economic lockdown began, shuttering all businesses and mandating digital currencies as the only means of financial exchange. Anyone without the identifying "mark of the beast" was unable to participate in the new system or access basic necessities.

Food rationing was instituted through a digital ID and tracking program. Private land ownership was abolished overnight. Travel restrictions sealed national borders, transforming the world into a vast open-air prison overseen by a total surveillance apparatus.

The inevitable purge began in earnest. Prominent dissenting voices like Jake Hilton, Michael Rood, and Japie van Zyl were summarily dragged from their homes in the dark of night, paraded before a global audience, and ritually executed in gruesome public spectacles meant to intimidate others into submission. Their deaths fulfilled the prophecy of Matthew 24:9 - "Then they will deliver you up to tribulation and put you to death, and you will be hated by all nations for my name's sake."

The persecutions made past inquisitions seem tame by comparison. The millions slaughtered by ancient empires like Antiochus and Nero had targeted entire populations indiscriminately. But Mohammed Ishmael's terror machine singled out specific sects and heretics with surgical precision, devising uniquely macabre methods of execution that pushed the bounds of human depravity.

With all opposition silenced, Mohammed Ishmael's supreme authority over the Earth went entirely unchallenged. Only the faithful remnant remained, scattered and in hiding, clinging to the sure promises of Scripture that justice would one day be served. As Revelation foretold, "the entire world was amazed and followed after the beast."

Yet even in these darkest of times, flickers of hope endured through secret underground networks that managed to stay one step ahead of the beast's all-seeing surveillance. Covert messages of encouragement from scattered believers helped sustain the light of truth. They took comfort in the knowledge that, as had been prophesied, the period of "great tribulation" would last only a defined length of time. Delivery was coming.

As the persecution intensified, a small resistance movement arose among the faithful followers of Yeshua.

Operating in secret cells and communicating via encoded messages, they began targeting key infrastructure to undermine the new world order.

However, just as the resistance was gaining traction, a startling event occurred. Two angelic beings appeared before the believers, relaying a message from heaven: "Flee to the wilderness, for the time is not yet ripe. Let not your hands be stained with violence."

Recognizing the divine command, the believers abandoned their plans of insurrection and went into hiding as commanded. It was then that reports began surfacing from Jerusalem of two mysterious figures prophesying in the city streets.

Clad in sackcloth, the two men condemned Mohammed Ishmael and the new world government in scathing terms that echoed with divine authority. "They have shed innocent blood, and Jerusalem and her streets are defiled with the blood of the righteous," they proclaimed.

The onlookers had no doubt as to the prophets' identities - they could be none other than Moses and Elijah, the two end-time witnesses foretold in Revelation 11:3-6 -

"And I will grant authority to my two witnesses, and they will prophesy for twelve hundred and sixty days, clothed in sackcloth...and if anyone wants to harm them, fire flows out of their mouth and devours their enemies; and if anyone wants to harm them, he must be killed in this way. These have the power to shut up the sky, so that rain will not fall during the days of their prophesying; and they have power over the waters to turn them into blood, and to strike the earth with every plague, as often as they desire."

The arrival of the two witnesses marked a dramatic escalation. The world was about to witness divine judgment poured out upon the earth with a fury not seen since the plagues of Egypt. As foretold, the countdown had begun to the final 1,260 days when the beast's dominion would be destroyed once and for all.

As predicted, the two witnesses prophesied clothed in sackcloth for 1,260 days in the streets of Jerusalem, unleashing plagues upon the land while condemning Mohammed Ishmael's falseclaims to divinity.

When their time was completed, Ishmael ordered their execution, fulfilling Revelation 11:7 - "When they have finished their testimony, the beast that comes up out of the abyss will make war with them, and overcome them and kill them."

Their bodies were left in the public square for all to see, just as had happened to Yeshua. But after 3 and a half days, "the breath of life from God came into them, and they stood on their feet; and great fear fell upon those who were watching them."

At that very moment, all the lights in the sky went dark. For three days and nights, an impenetrable blackness covered the entire earth. It was the sign spoken of by Yeshua before the destruction of the temple: "the sun will be darkened, and the moon will not give its light."

As the three days drew to a close, a brilliant light suddenly shone through the sky's black veil. The sound of a ram's horn blast, louder than any shofar ever blown, echoed across the world. A vast host of angels could be seen accompanying Yeshua as he descended through the opened heavens.

It was Tishri 1, the Biblical Feast of Trumpets - Yom Teruah. Every eye beheld Yeshua clothed in a robe dipped in blood, the same one worn in the heavenly vision of Revelation 19:13. As prophesied, “He will tread the wine press of the fierceness and wrath of God” (Revelation 19:15).

With a mighty voice, Yeshua declared “It is done!” fulfilling his statement upon the cross that “It is finished.” The seven years of desolation had ended. Now came the final coronation of the King of kings, and the resurrection of those who had lived according to his command.

Just as foretold by the sages, this was the “last day, the greatest day of the feast.” On this day of shouting and trumpet blasts, Yeshua’s mighty voice called forth all the resurrected dead, from faithful Abraham to the latest martyr. The dead in Messiah arose, their corruptible bodies transformed into glorified new ones.

All who had believed Yeshua and kept watch, whether living or dead, were gathered to meet him in the air. Their “gathering together to him” was the final ingathering of exiles spoken of by all the prophets. The times of restoration for all things had begun.

As Yeshua descended to the Mount of Olives, a massive heavenly host accompanied him - the same army he had promised would gather when he returns:

"Then the sign of the Son of Man will appear in heaven, and then all the tribes of the earth will mourn, and they will see the Son of Man coming on the clouds of heaven with power and great glory. And he will send his angels with a loud trumpet call, and they will gather his elect from the four winds, from one end of the heavens to the other." (Matthew 24:30-31)

Yeshua led this vast angelic army, bearing a title believers throughout the ages hadn't fully understood until this day - as revealed in Scripture:

"Now I saw heaven opened, and behold, a white horse. And He who sat on him was called Faithful and True, and in righteousness He judges and makes war...And the armies in heaven, clothed in fine linen, white and clean, followed Him on white horses." (Revelation 19:11, 14)

Daniel 12:1 also spoke of this coming prince: "At that time shall arise Michael, the great prince who has charge of your people. And there shall be a time of trouble, such as never has been since there was a nation till that time."

As Yeshua approached the temple, his robe dipped in blood, all the tribes of the earth began to mourn - as prophesied when they see "the sign of the Son of Man coming on the clouds of heaven." The full identity of Yeshua, and why he had come, was now revealed without any remaining doubt. He was Michael, the Archangel - the one true God of Israel.

As Yeshua's feet touched the Mount of Olives, a great chasm opened in the earth below. From it arose thick clouds of smoke and a stench so pungent it could be smelled from miles away.

The host of angels accompanying Yeshua took hold of Pope Leo XIV and Mohammed Ishmael, dragging them kicking and screaming towards the pit that had torn open before the holy city. Their desperate pleas for mercy fell on deaf ears as panic gripped their faces, the full reality of divine judgment now upon them.

The crowds watching exhaled in a collective gasp as the two men were hurled into the depths without hesitation. But their fate was merely a foretaste of what awaited Satan himself. For as the smoke billowed from the chasm, a great roar shook the earth, louder than any earthquake mankind had experienced.

Emerging from the pit with a murderous glare was none other than HaSatan, the ancient serpent - known by Christians and Jews alike as the devil and his demons.

Chained and bound, they were dragged before Yeshua to face final sentencing for crimes spanning eternity.

Revelation 20:10 provided chilling confirmation of the scene unfolding - “and the devil, who deceived them, was thrown into the lake of fire and sulfur where the beast and the false prophet were, and they will be tormented day and night forever and ever.”

But Yeshua’s next words brought startling clarity even to this well-known passage. “They will NOT be tormented forever, as the corrupted texts claim. For the wages of sin is death, as it is written. And the gift of God is eternal life through Messiah Yeshua our Lord.”

With that, Yeshua passed sentence upon the chief architects of humanity’s deception. Pope, Antichrist and Devil - all three were condemned to the second death promised in Revelation, to be destroyed both body and soul, cast into the lake of fire prepared for them since the foundation of the world.

Their final screams echoed in an agony no translation could capture as eternal fire consumed them. And so perished the master deceiver, the father of lies, who had corrupted even the most sacred of texts in a futile bid to postpone this day of judgment. But the LORD had kept his word - and the seeds of doom planted by the serpent had been uprooted forever.

With a glance, Yeshua dispatched the demonic hordes still chained at his feet, consigning them to the same ghastly fate. As the last of the damned disappeared into the lake of fire with a great wailing, Yeshua slammed shut the mouth of Sheol, sealing it irreversibly.

The stench cleared, and the now-silent chasm slowly closed behind them. All that remained was a scene of unspeakable rejoicing across the whole hosts of heaven, as the apostate kingdom received its just demise after 6,000 years of rebellion against the Most High. Their destruction echoed the eternal promise of Revelation 20:14 - “Then death and Hades were thrown into the lake of fire. This is the second death, the lake of fire.”

At long last, the terrors spoken of since Eden had run their course. Humanity’s archenemies through the ages - serpent, prophet and beast alike - had all met the grim end prescribed for them. Never again would they vex the earth or its inhabitants. The great dragon was cast down once and for all, his final overthrow signaling the dawning of a new eternal era of peace.

Chapter 4 - The Coming of the Kingdom

The revelation of the Ark of the Covenant in the Temple rocked the entire world. Religious scholars from every faith tradition scrambled to understand its significance. For those who saw its discovery as a divine sign, it marked the closing of one age and the opening of a new chapter in God's unfolding plan.

Within weeks of the Ark's installation, strange celestial events began occurring. Reports emerged from observatories worldwide of increased solar activity, spectacular auroras visible even in tropical regions, and disturbances in the magnetosphere. Astronomers were puzzled, as the sun was well past its maximum in the 11-year solar cycle when such effects usually peak.

It was during this period that Mohammed Ishmael's influence reached its zenith. His control over the Babylon Alliance was now absolute, and even traditionally neutral nations found themselves drawn into his sphere. When the King of Saudi Arabia voiced reluctance to fully align with the New Babylon regime, Ishmael had him quietly replaced through a bloodless coup. By 2029, no world leader could openly oppose him without risking severe political and economic repercussions.

In Israel, tensions flared as ultra-orthodox groups called for halting the Temple rituals that recognized Jesus as Messiah. Vicious protests erupted near the Western Wall, with rabbis on both sides narrowly avoiding violence through passionate pleas for unity. The division exposed fault lines that had existed beneath the surface for years.

It was amid this turmoil that a sudden blast shattered the skies above Nazareth. A brilliant light, intense enough to damage eyes yet painless to gaze upon, descended from heaven like a massive column. When the blinding radiance faded, a figure stood revealed - a man of such surpassing glory and purity that all who beheld him fell prostrate, unable to stand in His Presence.

A voice like thunder yet gentle as a summer breeze echoed across the heavens in a language understood by all who heard: "Do not be afraid. I am Yeshua, whom you call Jesus. I have come to proclaim the arrival of My kingdom. A time of trouble is coming upon the earth, but take heart, for I have overcome the world."

As people gazed upon His dazzling yet compassionate face, recognition and wonder dawned within. Many wept at seeing the One whose love had sustained them through hardship; whose grace had guided their steps even in darkness. Rabbis, imams, priests - all knew without question that the Creator of angels and stars now walked as a man among them.

Yeshua spoke of judgments to come upon the proud and wicked, but also of a glorious kingdom of peace that would follow. Those whose hearts were inclined toward justice, mercy and humility would find refuge from the coming storm. He revealed glimpses of this coming era through prophetic visions that left audiences awestruck yet inspired with hope.

When Ishmael received reports of these happenings, fury and panic gripped him. All his plans teetered on the edge of ruin. Through occult abilities honed since childhood, he sent demonic spirits across Israel to incite chaos. But wherever they went, a bright light preceded Yeshua, casting the shadows into full retreat.

Frantic, Ishmael issued a dire public warning that Yeshua was attempting to upset the peace they had sacrificed so much to build. Yet people could see the truth - that while Yeshua brought a message of personal accountability before God, Ishmael offered only dependence on his government and condemnation of nonconformity. They knew in their hearts that only one of the two spoke with divine authority.

As panic turned to open rebellion in some regions, Ishmael unleashed horrors not seen in Israel for generations. Terrorist cells long kept dormant through threats and bribes sprang into grisly action, bombing synagogues, shooting crowds and sending parcel bombs through the mails. The atrocities were aimed at fracturing Israeli unity and provoking retaliation, but had the opposite effect of drawing people closer to God in repentance and prayer.

Yeshua countered with compassion. Though righteous anger could be seen in his eyes at the evil unleashed, he spoke only of mercy, forgiveness and reconciling enemies through nonviolent civil disobedience. His followers began sit-ins and peaceful protests that multiplied daily, paralyzing infrastructure through sheer numbers asserting their God-given rights with dignity rather than force.

The spiritual conflict between Yeshua and Ishmael intensified to a fever pitch. Signs, wonders and mysteries multiplied on both sides as if heaven and hell itself had come down to Earth. Animals spoke and the dead were raised on one hand, while plagues, earthquakes and occult terrors erupted from the other. The whole human family bore witness to the final battle of good versus evil, light versus darkness, played out in the Holy Land at the end of days.

At long last the fated moment came. Ishmael, deranged by his diminishing control yet still wielding immense political power, led armies from Iran and surrounding nations against Jerusalem itself. A vast host encircled the mountain where Yeshua gathered his followers, perhaps a hundred thousand souls in all.

They awaited the approaching hordes calmly, unarmed yet prepared to become martyrs for the Kingdom of Heaven. Ishmael's twisted will demanded a blood sacrifice to invoke ancient evil, and Yeshua's disciples willingly offered themselves as lambs led to the slaughter. As the first arrows and bullets whistled toward the mass of believers, Yeshua alone strode forward to face the approaching storm.

He lifted his arms, and the raging skies answered. Peals of thunder like the cracking of mountains drowned all other sounds. Blinding bolts of lightning rained down from above with surgical precision, disintegrating weapons and vaporizing armies where they stood. Shell-shocked soldiers stumbled across a landscape of smoldering vehicles and melted equipment, unable to comprehend the devastation.

Within moments, not a single invading soldier remained standing. Complete silence fell but for the crackle of burning metal and the moans of the wounded. The dust began to settle, revealing Yeshua still standing alone in the valley with arms outstretched, wreathed in a corona of electromagnetic glory. All who witnessed understood that they beheld a divine warrior, the victorious commander of the hosts of heaven come to defend Israel and humble the armies of man.

None dared approach through fear and reverence. But then, Yeshua spoke in a voice like the roar of many waters: "Let all who come against My people in violence know that I am the LORD your God, who fights for Israel! This day I establish My kingdom upon the earth, never again to be shaken. go now and trouble Israel no more."

Ishmael was found cowering amid the wreckage alongside a few remaining bodyguards, his occult aura shattered. As he was led away in chains, the news began to spread - every remaining military force that had attacked was also destroyed in places as far as Iran and Turkey, overcome without a shot fired in supernatural displays of God's sovereignty.

Over the following weeks, miracles continued across Israel and the world. The dead were raised. The sick healed. Falsehoods exposed and injustices righted wherever Yeshua walked. No disease could stand before him. No secret remained hidden from his gaze. It became apparent that God had come to judge justly and set all things in order.

With Ishmael's regime dissolved, the structure of world power began reorganizing along biblical precepts.

Representatives from every nation voluntarily came to Jerusalem to realign their laws and systems according to eternal righteousness. Yeshua himself personally oversaw the rebuilding of international systems, establishing divine justice, restorative practices, environmental protection and generous provision for the poor as core principles.

Financial controls established by the old world order crumbled. Usury, private central banking and currency monopoly disappeared overnight. A jubilee Year of Release erased national debts and balanced trade between all peoples. Precious metals and fair interest-free loans reinstated local self-sufficiency and economic justice globally. Unfettered free markets brought unparalleled prosperity.

The newly restored Sanhedrin in Jerusalem, now comprised equally of Jewish, Muslim and Christian religious leaders devoted to Yeshua, acted as an international council enforcing Biblical standards of leadership and behavior. All pledged allegiance to God's kingdom and forsook solely nationalistic loyalties, enabling unprecedented cooperation. Contentious issues long kept unresolved were finally addressed with wisdom, justice and healing.

Israel itself was reorganized into a constitutional monarchy, with King David's greater son Yeshua as sovereign. True believing Jews, Muslims and Christians from all nations were granted citizenship and given plots of land to cultivate as the twelve tribes had of old. Infrastructure, schools, medical clinics and non-polluting energy sprang up across the renewed kingdom at an astounding pace.

As prophets of old foretold, the deserts bloomed. Irrigation canals channeled year-round water to parched regions. Forests and wildlife returned to areas long barren from neglect and overuse. Advanced agricultural techniques tripled crop yields and enabled sustainable organic farming on a scale to feed the world many times over. Clean energy eliminated pollution. Diseases were conquered through advances in preventive care. Life spans increased dramatically.

The global effects rippled out from Israel like rings across a pond. Inspired by her light, all peoples turned from corruption, wastefulness and oppression to build just,

As the new kingdom continued to flourish under Yeshua's benevolent rule, focus turned toward fulfilling the prophecies of a millennium of peace. Construction began on a vast holy city anchored around the Temple Mount, with twelve outer gates bearing the names of Israel's tribes. Marble causeways and gardens radiated outward, affording housing, marketplaces and green spaces for millions of pilgrims.

The Third Temple itself was expanded to accommodate the countless worshipers drawn daily to experience God's presence. Priests and Levites from among the tribes were consecrated to return Temple worship according to Bible statutes, their numbers swelled by righteous converts. Animal sacrifices combined with praise, prayer and prophetic outpourings unparalleled in holiness.

Through worldwide outreach, remnant believers from every nation took pilgrimage to Jerusalem for feasts and holy convocations. Languages and cultures that had been set against one another now intermingled freely.

Families long separated by borders reunited in joy, their reunion a visible reminder that Yeshua had overcome the ancient divisions between humankind.

Provision during this millennium exceeded all expectations. Fields miraculously yielded three crops annually through innovative rainwater capture and soil renewal techniques. Solar and wind energy, guided by new discoveries in quantum field theory, eliminated all pollution while providing more than enough power. Hovercraft and magnetic levitation transportation zipped between major population hubs.

Advanced medical understanding resulted from open collaboration rather than secretive competition. Genetic disorders were cured. Aging processes slowed dramatically. Some who underwent intensive treatment in shining medical cities rose from death beds as if returning from mere sleep, restored to vibrant youth. Many lived over a century yet remained hale and fit in physique and mind.

With basic needs provided for all and work focused on improving life, leisure and creativity flourished as never before. Advances in fields from advanced manufacturing and 3D printing to renewable energy technologies to arts and entertainment spilled over like an exuberant overflowing fountain, shifting the very nature of civilization toward more noble heights.

Some wonders stretched beyond ordinary comprehension. Objects could be seen disappearing and reappearing elsewhere with a thought. Gravity and inertia seemed negotiable rather than immutable natural laws. Communications took place instantaneously across any distance through a borderless web where all shared and none hoarded secrets or intellectual property for private gain.

During this Sabbath millennium, Satan and his rebellious angels were confined to the nether realms, unable to incite war, oppression or wickedness upon humanity. With evil's interfering hand removed, the full potential of redeemed man in partnership with his Creator could at last be seen. Some even posited that the longer spans mentioned in ancient texts referred not to ordinary years but multidimensional frequencies, hinting this era could stretch far beyond a millennium by our current understanding.

At last, on the eve of the thousandth anniversary, the chained dragon was released from the depths once more. He emerged amid the desolate ruins of ancient Iraq, drawn to the black stone that had corrupted faithful souls since time began. There he gathered the dregs of humanity still clinging to rebellion against the light.

Dwarfed by the glory now radiating from Israel, these remnants like ash and cinders appeared pitiful yet bitterly defiant.

Underlying currents of discord, though muted during the millennium, were reawakened by Satan's sinister touch.
Age-old grievances and supremacist doctrines proliferated once more in hearts not fully surrendered.
Some, pretending alliance with God, secretly hungered for privileges lost when all peoples became equally valued under Yeshua's rule. Others nursed resentment that their ancestors' oppression had at last faced correction.

These tinder-dry souls were set aflame by the Great Dragon's breath. Promised a restored past and revenge upon those who had humiliated them, they willingly sold their lives in exchange. Demon-possessed, crazed with bloodlust yet unaware of the fate awaiting their revolt, the growing demonic host massed under the black banners of ancient evil. Their war cry carried a subtle taint, twisting scriptures by turning their meaning upon truth and righteousness.

Satan's sinister plan, hatched since before creation, neared its penultimate stroke. On the very heels of a utopian golden era, he would whip the old hatreds to a frenzy and thrust humanity back into strife and chaos, destroying with one blow all the reforms of the past thousand years. Through deception and proxy armies, he aimed to directly assault the Temple and overthrow Israel's God-ordained government once and for all.

The mustering hordes converged like a plague of locusts from every direction toward Jerusalem, swarming over the mountains of Israel with hatred, madness and covetousness in their eyes. Though their forces appeared mighty, the faithful remained undisturbed within the holy city's mighty walls, certain of the outcome. Under Yeshua's watchful eye, Temple worship proceeded with heightened fervor.

At last the dark tide crested Golgotha hill and lurched snarling into view, their every step pulled by strands of malice emanating from Hell itself. With bloodcurdling ululations they stormed down the slopes with scythe-like blades and staves aflame, bent upon pillage, murder and desecration. But as the first waves crested the valley's brink, a resplendent figure suddenly materialized before the gates alone to bar their way.

It was Yeshua, clad in robes of electroluminescent glory that pulsed with restrained power. But his face shone with ineffable love, patience and sorrow for the lost souls driven to madness and destruction. Spreading his arms, he called out in a voice that stilled the raging host despite itself – “Why have you come? Turn back, my children, for your purpose cannot stand. I have overcome the world!”

Yet demonic madness gripped them too forcefully to withdraw. With war cries turning to whimpers of horror at what they had unleashed, the foremost ranks surged forward wielding crude arms against He who had come to save them from wrath to come. Their blades and staves grew white hot and crumbled to ashes at his mere nearness as he awaited their final, damning choice.

Some glimpsed the truth in that terrible moment and cast themselves pleading on the ground. In a heartbeat they found salvation, the miasma lifted, their wills restored as children of light once more. But the greater number charged in fanaticism, too far gone to turn back even as flesh sloughed from their grasping hands. As the first reached Yeshua they erupted into plasma, souls ripped unshriven from flesh, scattering on screaming winds to the outer darkness prepared for such as turned from redemption.

A horrifying spectacle followed as the ravening mob disintegrated upon an unseen yet impenetrable field emanating from Israel's Deliverer. Multitudes evaporated where they stood or were flung helplessly aside, vanishing into the aether. But none laid hand upon Yeshua or passed the line he had drawn, an event horizon from which no evil could return intact.

Struggle was over in a twinkling. When sight returned, a scene of char and cinders stretched bleakly where once a demon throng had rampaged. A still, small voice spoke through the ruins: "It is finished. Go now, and trouble My people no more. This is the last day of sorrows; soon I make all things new."

With that he withdrew, and silence fell but for the groans of souls newly freed. All humanity gazed in awe and gratitude, realizing anew how thin was the veil normally dividing this life from the next. Rapt souls in the holy city sank weeping at his feet in thanksgiving, as much for redemption won as enemies vanquished. For in that long-awaited day Satan had at last been cast down once and for all, his works fully destroyed and rule over the living broken.

So ended the appointed millennium. And with it terminated humanity's final exam, the proving of souls under ultimate freedom. God's purposes could at last be unveiled without hindrance. As His glory swollen the firmament from horizon to horizon, voices like mighty winds and waters cried out:

“The kingdoms of this world have become the kingdom of our Lord, and of his Messiah, and he will reign forever and ever!”

Then reality itself began unfolding in new dimensions beyond comprehension. As redeemed souls joined their Creator beyond spacetime, all sang praise unceasing through coming eons. And the Lord God came down among them, and destruction was no more. Where once had stood a lowly village in an occupied land, now blazed a new Jerusalem vast as the eternal realm itself. Her radiance lit all places and all souls, young and old, joined as one family in joy unspeakable forever under their beloved King.

With Satan's final defeat, a new eternity began to blossom. As Yeshua had promised, He made all things new, recreating reality itself according to His vision of perfect peace, justice and love.

The holy city that had encompassed Jerusalem expanded without end, its borders stretching across all places and times yet remaining eternally anchored at its heart. Countless varieties of life thrived within its gleaming towers and hanging gardens, bathed in the radiance of God's indwelling Presence.

Those redeemed from humanity rejoined lost loved ones, gaining perfection of body without scar or blemish, lithe and strong yet marked by the wounds of trial overcome through Grace. Souls of all eras mingled freely, languages melting into nuanced spiritual communication that needed no translation. All shared a unified field of joyful service, creativity and discovery unbounded yet perfectly focused.

Wilderness and waterless places were made to bloom beyond imagining. Infinite landscapes both familiar and strange stretched endlessly, inhabited by beings that had never known corruption or death. Reptiles grazed beside mammals. Predators dwelled at peace with gentler creatures, all living in trust under the watchful eye of their Creator.

The angelic host took up songs of praise that swelled in majestic spirals throughout the ages, each fresh exaltation arising from deeper understanding hard-won through adversity. Having stood with God against evil since before time, they rejoiced to see humanity finally ushered home in glory. Their choirs resounded with thanksgiving for victory through the Lamb.

Even those who had died unbelieving but never fully hardened their hearts found redemption in God's mercy. Tormented souls like Ishmael who had yielded to darkness yet never lost their divine image underwent purification, learning through reminders of truth once rejected how they had been deceived. In time all knelt gladly, forgiven and made whole.

Only the arch-deceiver and those few who had followed him in final, bitter defiance to the end remained outside Paradise in exile. Cast out at last to wandering, these encountered fitting judgments tailored to their solitary, twisted natures and deliberate flight from love. Emptied of all purpose that had given meaning outside submission to their Creator, their solitary, purposeless aeons stretched vast yet purposeless as penance.

But even these received not infinite torment, for God's loving kindness extends farther than any might dare imagine. Once all balances were rightly reckoned through ages would his majestic mercy absorb the last residues of darknes and emptiness, making all things

new. Then harmony, beauty, goodness and joy would permeate the multiverse eternally, and all souls unite in untroubled communion under their Redeemer's gracious rule through unending eons of discovery, friendship and praise.

Such was the glorious renewal ushered in through Yeshua's victory over sin and death. The long chapters of humanity's testing had at last reached their drama's resolution, paving the way for God's ultimate purposes of oneness with His creation to unfold far beyond mortal ken. And His redeemed people reign with Him through coming glories that shine forth eternally from that holy city whose architect and builder is God.

To all those called by the name of Yeshua - keep your lamps filled and your wicks trimmed, for we have yet to fully enter that eternal Sabbath rest prepared for God's people. Though darkness seems once again to grow in this failing age, take heart - the Dragon has been defeated, and his days are surely numbered.

Let your light shine so that others may see your good works and glorify your Father in heaven. Lift the fallen and bind up the brokenhearted with compassion. Speak truth boldly yet gently. Stand for justice and mercy as the salt of the earth.

Press on toward the high calling before you with endurance, fixing your eyes on Yeshua, the author and perfecter of our faith. Draw near to God, and he will draw near to you. Commit your lives fully to him in humble faith and obedience, and you will be clothed with power from on high.

Dark though the night appears, keep watch - for at any moment the Bridegroom may return to gather His own. The dawn is coming, dear ones - the dawn of eternal righteousness, joy and peace under His sovereign and loving rule. May your discernment increase, and your love for Him and one another grow exceedingly until that Glorious Day.

Maranatha! Come quickly, Lord Yeshua! Even so, come, Lord Yeshua!
